Raz Ohara

The Last Legend

After his end of 1999 debut "Realtime Voyeur", "The Last Legend" is Raz Ohara's 2nd longplayer which has been released on Kitty-Yo on 02. March 2001. Whereas the debut clearly was a funk record, close to early Prince recordings taking in hip hop samples, this one took over the thoughtful signs in Raz' music. Produced quietly for 6 months in Markus Waibel's Berlin studio, almost all tracks are pure vocal and guitar music, with hidden samples and overdubs here and there...

A very personal record that possibly could have only been recorded under such seclusive circumstances. You might compare it to Nick Drake. Yet Raz' incredible soul voice positions this record still as well amongst artists such as Finley Quayle or even the calmer Lenny Kravitz recordings.
